An Eye for an Eye

Eye injuries occur every day. Some can be as minor as getting dust particles or a bug in your eye or as devastating as complete loss of vision. By taking some precautions and using eye protection, you can reduce your chances of having an eye injury.

Forty percent of eye injuries happen at home. Injuries can occur during Do It Yourself projects, cooking, chemical splashes, sporting events or while doing yard work. When choosing eye protection, consider the right equipment for the job you're doing.

If you should sustain an eye injury, seek medical attention as soon as possible. Trying to determine severity of the injury or attempting remove anything embedded in your eye yourself could cause further damage.

Your eyesight is precious and not to be taken for granted. Wearing proper eye protection will greatly reduce your chances of having an eye injury and is a simple way to keep your eyes safe.
